In the Next Issue

Behavioral Assessment in Animal Models: Relevance for Human Psychopathology

Volume 55, Number 2

Scientific Editors: Melinda A. Novak and Jerrold S. Meyer

Planned contents:

• Introduction—Melinda Novak and Jerrold S. Meyer
• Maintaining the Clinical Relevance of Animal Models in Translational Studies of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder—Hagit Cohen, Michael A. Matar, and Joseph Zohar
• Utilizing Tests and Models to Assess Depressive-like Behavior in Rodents—John F. Cryan and David A. Slattery
• Social Defeat as an Animal Model for Depression—Fiona Hollis and Mohamed Kabbaj
• Assessing spatial learning and memory in rodents—Charles V. Vorhees and Michael T. Williams
• Assessing Anxiety in Nonhuman Primates—Kristine Coleman and Peter J. Pierre
• Nonhuman Primate Models of Depression—Julie M. Worlein
• Stereotypic Behavior in Nonhuman Primates as a Model for the Human Condition—Corrine K. Lutz
• Use of the Cross-Translational Model to Study Self-Injurious Behavior in Human and Nonhuman Primates—Melinda A. Novak, Saif N. El-Mallah, and Mark T. Menard
• Models of Stress in Non-Human Primates and Their Relevance for Neuropsychiatric Disorders—Jerrold S. Meyer and Amanda F. Hamel
• Nonhuman Primate Models of Neuropsychiatric Disorders: Influences of Early Rearing, Genetics, and Epigenetics—Amanda M. Dettmer and Stephen J. Suomi
• Animal Models of Fear Relapse—Travis D. Goode and Stephen Maren
• IACUC Considerations in Reviewing Protocols for Animal Models of Human Psychopathology—Louis DiVincenti, Jr. and Jeffrey D. Wyatt

Support ILAR’s Mission

Although all individual and institutional subscriptions are now administered by Oxford University Press, the category of ILAR Supporting Institutional Associates is handled directly by ILAR. This special category is for US organizations that pay $1,675 (or, for non-US-based organizations, $1,775) to provide extra support for ILAR to carry out its mission. Supporting Institutional Associates receive 20 subscriptions, online access, and copies of the Guide for the Care and Use of Laboratory Animals as well as one copy of other ILAR reports upon request. Checks from Supporting Institutional Associates should be made payable to National Academy of Sciences – ILAR and mailed to Institute for Laboratory Animal Research, 500 Fifth Street NW, Washington, DC 20001, USA.

Subscribe or order online:
http://ilarjournal.oxfordjournals.org/